Truly Wonderful, Wonderful.

"Wonders will never cease," is certainly a true saying, for the old blue law was in force in Lexington Sunday. It happened in this way. The Fayette grand jury last week had indictments drawn up against Mayor Combs and every other executive officer of that city, and is holding them over their heads as clubs to make them enforce the law as to Sunday closing of saloons. This was done by the Law and Order League, a secret organization. Mayor Combs then promised that the Sabbath should be a day apart from the rest of the week and should be kept inviolate. Consequently, on Sunday only the churches and Sunday schools, hotels and restaurants were allowed to do business in Lexington. Stop and think of it! In Lexington, Ky.! Truly, it is wonderful. The old blue laws of New England were rigidly enforced. How long, oh! how long, will this last in this good old town of churches? Echo answers, until the grand jury adjourns.

The following branches of trade were suspended by the Mayor's sweeping order: Saloons, groceries, butcher shops, markethouse, barber shops, livery stables, drug stores, with the exception of the prescription department, bakeries, confectionaries, bait ball games, fruit stands, ice wagons, milk depots, milk wagons, weinerwurst stands, soda fountains, night hawks, news boys, boot blacks.

Come down on the "interrubbin," good people, they seem to run that line for your special convenience, and we will furnish you with all the good things you want.

A Great Sensation.

There was a big sensation in Leesville, Ind., when W. H. Brown of that place, who was expected to die, had his life saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. He writes: "I endured insufferable agonies from Asthma but your New Discovery gave me immediate relief and soon thereafter effected a complete cure." Similar cures of Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and Grip are numerous. It's the peerless remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. Trial bottles free.

Wanted.

Special Representative in this county and adjoining territories, to represent and advertise an old established business house of solid financial standing. Salary $21 weekly, with expenses advanced each Monday by check direct from headquarters. Horse and buggy furnished when necessary; position permanent. Address Blew Bros & Co., Dept. A, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Trial Continued.

Lewis Mitchell, the negro charged with attempting to poison the family of James Mulligan, was arraigned at Lexington, Friday, and the case was continued to October 7, the Commonwealth not being ready for trial.

"Ticky Jim" Is No More.

"Ticky Jim" Bach, the notorious witness for the defense in the Jett-White murder trial, was killed by his former wife at Jackson, Saturday morning, while trying to force an entrance into her mother's home.

Another Fayette Suicide.

Simeon Clemmons, a prominent young man of Fayette county, committed suicide by shooting himself with a shotgun.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver, of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Oberdorfer's drug store.

A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Boschoe's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup; so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. At all druggists, 25c; large size 75c. New trial bottles, 10c. At all druggists.

HENRY C. PAYNE ILL.

Postmaster General Has Marked Symptoms of Heart Trouble.

Several Times He Had Sinking Spells and it Was Thought the End Was Near—He Rallied and His Condition is Encouraging.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Postmaster General Henry C. Payne is seriously ill at his apartments at the Hotel Arlington here. Marked symptoms of heart trouble have developed and his condition became so serious during the day as to cause grave concern. Mr. Payne returned recently from a trip in the west and appeared to be feeling in much improved condition, though his health has been poor for a long time.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The condition of Postmaster General Payne, whose serious illness was announced Thursday night, continued extremely grave throughout Friday. There were times during the day, notably in the early morning and late in the afternoon, when the attending physicians believed the end was near at hand, but the patient responded to the heroic remedies applied and seemed to regain some of the lost ground. Friday night at about 8 o'clock Mr. Payne fell into a restless sleep, which continued for some time. The doctors regarded this as encouraging for a peaceful night.

The greatest cause of alarm was the feebleness of the heart action and it was found necessary to administer saline solution and nitro-glycerine to stimulate that organ. Only moderately sized doses were given, however.

and in each case the response was gratifying.

Washington, Oct. 3.—After a day filled with strong hopes, alternating with the gravest fears of almost immediate dissolution, Postmaster General Payne's condition late Sunday night was declared by his physicians to be decidedly more encouraging, but they are unwilling to hazard an opinion as to the future. In the early hours his heart action became decidedly weaker with resultant feebleness of pulse and unconsciousness. At times he suffered intense pain and once or twice he cried out in his agony. These paroxysms were followed by periods of exhaustion with brief intervals of comparative freedom from pain, but the heart action continued to give the physicians the greatest concern.

Several times during the day the pulse became so feeble that it seemed it must cease altogether and at one time the physicians said the postmaster general was as near death as few ever get and survive the day. At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon the doctors fully believed that the end was at hand, and the family, who were at dinner, were summoned.

Early Monday morning Dr. Magruder left the sick room for his home, leaving Dr. Grayson in charge. Dr. Magruder's report was that Mr. Payne's improvement continued and if this rate of improvement continues the next bulletin would doubtless be gratifying. He said that the postmaster general was retaining his nourishment and had had no sinking spells during the evening when he awoke from his sleep, which was necessarily fitful, he was able to recognize those about him. Dr. Magruder added that Mr. Payne's heart action continued good.

THE INDIAN SCHOOLS.

Annual Report of Miss Estelle Reel, the Superintendent.

Washington, Sept. 30.—In her annual report to the commission of Indian affairs, Miss Estelle Reel, superintendent of Indian schools, says the past year has shown marked improvements in the methods of instruction and that gratifying progress has been made in teaching English. The report says that on every reservation where day schools are located the latter's good effects upon the older Indians can plainly be seen. The day school system, it is stated, has reached its best developments on the Pine Ridge and Rosebud reservations. Special attention has been given to agriculture and industrial training in Indian school work.

FLOOD IN NEW MEXICO.

Half a Town Destroyed and a Dozen People Drowned.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 3.—From all indications now at hand from recent reports received from the overflowed country in the Brownsville section, it appears that there is a strong probability that the bed of the Rio Grande will be shown when the waters have receded to be occupying the bed of the Arroyo Colorado, which years ago was its original bed. Should this be true the people of this region of Texas who would be bereft of the river would suffer greatly. The city of Brownsville, one of the rapidly growing towns of the state, would be cut off from the river, the miles of irrigation ditches and canals dug would be rendered worthless and property values dependent upon the Rio Grande's flow will be materially cut down. This would apply to considerable area, being the land below the Arroyo into which the river is running 12 miles above Brownsville.

The national title to this property is not in question. About seven years ago a joint commission appointed by the respective governments of the United States and Mexico owing to the troublesome habit of the river changing its course hit upon a compromise boundary and two years ago marked it with monuments. The boundary rests where they stand, however the river may shift about.

Las Vegas, N. M., Oct. 3.—Half the town of Watrous was destroyed by the flood and at least 12 persons were drowned. Among these were the three children of J. A. Stevens, Felix Villaret, his wife, two sisters and several children and O. F. Porter. J. E. Stevens and his wife escaped and have been brought here. They are in a critical condition. Many persons were rescued from trees and rooftops. The greatest damage was around the junction of Mora and Sapello creeks. The rock crusher, the great iron bridge and much track at Watrous were washed away. The Gallinas river formed a new channel here. In the Gallinas canyon the dams of the Agua Pura Co. broke, bringing a terrific flood on the city. The Montezuma Hot Springs track went out in many places. Half a dozen bridges were destroyed and the Montezuma bath houses were partly carried away. For two blocks on Bridge street every business house was flooded.

CAMPAIGN BUTTONS.

A Blunder Caused Democratic Committee to Issue a Double Set.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—A blunder has caused the democratic national committee to issue a double set of campaign buttons. A large number of the buttons were delivered at headquarters recently, when the managers were startled to find the lineaments of Parker and Davis, both done in a hectic pink, staring from a background of gold.

Thousands of buttons had been expressed to western states by the time the discovery was made, and a fear that the Bryanites might take umbrage led the leaders to place an order for a smaller button with Parker and Davis ensconced in an environment of silver. These were sent to Nebraska and other western states, while the gold faced buttons were recalled and distributed elsewhere.

A FLOOR COLLAPSED.

About 150 Persons Were Precipitated Into the Basement and Many Hurt.

Adams, Mass., Oct. 3.—While Rt. Rev. Thomas D. Beaven, Roman Catholic bishop, of Springfield, was laying the cornerstone of St. Stanislaus Polish church here Sunday afternoon a floor collapsed, precipitating 150 persons into the basement. Thirty-seven persons were so injured as to require medical treatment. Of this number the injuries of 16 are serious and in one case may prove fatal. The others sustained minor cuts and bruises. Bishop Beaven and several of the priests assisting him were slightly hurt.

White Man Lynched.

Charleston, S. C., Oct. 3.—John Merson, the white man who killed Will T. Floyd at Kershaw, was taken from the jail by a mob and escorted outside the town limits, where he was hanged to a tree. Two shots were fired into his body as he swung off.

The American Evangelists.

Cardin, Oct. 3.—Reuben A. Torrey and C. M. Alexander, the American evangelists, Sunday opened a mission in Torrey hall, which had been specially built for the purpose, and which has a capacity of 7,000 persons. Many were turned away.

Preached in Trinity Church. New York, Oct. 3.—Trinity Church, rich in historical associations, and one of the landmarks of New York, had an event of interest added to its chronicles Sunday when its grace, the archbishop of Canterbury, preached within its walls.

Attendance at the World's Fair. St. Louis, Oct. 3.—During the 134 days that the World's fair has been open up to the closing of the gates Saturday night, 12,515,511 admissions have been recorded. The attendance recorded for the past week was 722,565.

Repaying Uncle Sam.

St. Louis, Oct. 3.—Another semi-monthly payment of $500,000 on the $4,600,000 government loan was made by the management of the Louisiana Purchase exposition. The total amount paid up to date is $3,408,149.

AMUSEMENTS.

—Tom Lee, who is to appear at the Paris Grand-to-morrow night in a musical comedy success, "My Wife's Family," is, as all will remember, a tall thin seven footer. Well, he isn't exactly seven feet tall, but when he makes up his ridiculous wardrobe it gives him that appearance. Like DeWolfe Hopper, of comic opera fame, he has only to appear upon the stage to make you laugh. The new comic song, "Accidents Will Happen," sung by this gentleman, is one of the funniest conceits of the season.
Prices, 35, 50 and 75 cents.

Y. M. I. Defeats Paris.

Before one of the largest crowds ever seen at a ball game in this section of the country the Y. M. I. team, of Lexington, defeated Paris' crack team Sunday afternoon, at Hamilton Place, about two miles this side of Lexington, by the score of 4 to 3. The game was exciting from start to finish, and the 204 rooters present from this city were very quiet and sore after the game, for it was a game Paris should have won. The game was lost by O'Connor, the Paris catcher, who had been imported from Cincinnati after being highly recommended. Cooper pitched winning ball throughout, only giving the Lexington men three hits. In the box for Y. M. I. was a Texas lad named Reuchter, who did most excellent work, being well supported behind the bat by Dempsey, a Paris boy. Take it as a whole it was a game worth going miles to see.

Dies of Apoplexy.

Major H. B. McClelland, one of the most noted educators in this State, and who recently resigned the principalship of Sayre Institute, at Lexington, after holding the office for nearly half a century, died at his home in that city Saturday night as a result of a stroke of apoplexy. He was stricken while attending service in church preparatory to the communion service. He was removed to his home in the ambulance and never rallied.
At the time of his death he was Secretary of the Sons of the American Revolution for Kentucky, and was a Confederate soldier.

Society's New Game.

"Trail" has taken society by storm. It is something new, something different. "Trail," as the name implies, is founded on a popular hunting sport, is played with fifty-three fine cards in four colors, representing a fox to be chased and caught, and four packs of hounds of thirteen each. "Trail" has a constantly recurring interest for players as they perfect their playing from evening to evening, in marked contrast to certain recent boisterous games that bore the players at the end of an hour.

With the one pack six other splendid, new, copyright games can be played. Two Educational games, and two games of Fun, making it suitable for all members of a family.
"Trail" can be had of dealers or sent post-paid, 75c gilt-edge, plain 50c. Rules for the seven games free.

"Don't Care a D—n."

Lieut. Gov. W. P. Thorne's date to speak in Madisonville was canceled by the Democratic State Campaign Committee at the request of Hopkins county voters, because of Gov. Thorne's pardon of Clem Buchter, who murdered his daughter under extremely revolting circumstances.

Gov. Beckham says he will never leave the State again during his term of office. "Sweet William" Thorne says he "Don't care a d—n what they say about it." Maybe he will care two d—ns before they get through with him about it.

Makes a Clean Sweep.

There's nothing like doing a thing thoroughly. Of all the salves you ever heard of, Bucklen's Arnica Salve is the best. It sweeps away and cures Burns, Sores, Bruises, Cuts, boils, Ulcers, Skin Eruptions and Piles. It only costs 25c, and guaranteed to give satisfaction by Oberdorfer, the druggist.

A Thoughtful Man.

M. M. Austin, of Winchester, Ind., knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at Oberdorfer's Drug Store.

Retires With Honors.

Joseph Jefferson, after more than 70 years on the stage, during which time he has become one of the most honored and beloved members of the dramatic profession, has decided absolutely never to resume his theatrical career.

Big Payroll.

The contractors working on Main street paid off on square in front of THE NEWS office Saturday afternoon and it was quite an interesting sight to see the colored laborers opening their envelopes. Saturday's payroll amounted to over $1,700. A nice little sum to put into circulation.

Fell From Ladder.

Hatton Morris, the colored porter at the Windsor Hotel, was washing windows Saturday afternoon, from the top of a very high step-ladder, when he lost his balance and fell heavily to the hard tiling floor of the hotel office. It was thought he was fatally hurt for several hours afterwards, but he finally came around all right.

Shooting Affray.

At Centerville, yesterday, Jim Ryles and Wakeman Moore became involved in a difficulty when Ryles shot Moore twice, the shots taking effect one in each leg, the bone of the right leg being shattered. Ryles surrendered himself to Squire Barlow, who placed him under bond for appearance as soon as Moore is able to attend court. The difficulty occurred near the public school building.

New Candidates.

Mr. Skillman is one of our best known farmers, fully qualified in every way for the office and will make a strong candidate. His deputy, Mr. Turner, possesses the qualifications, is popular, and adds strength to the ticket. Mr. Geo. W. Redmon is announced in this issue as a candidate for magistrate of the Little Rock precinct. Mr. Redmon is one of our most substantial farmers, equipped in every way for the office to which he aspires, and if elected the interests of Bourbon county will be in safe hands.

Interurban People Give Parisians the Hot End of It.

When it comes to accommodations on the Interurban, Paris people are at all times ignored and all of the accommodations go to Lexington. We are entitled to the same consideration as this old hog-hish town of Lexington and we are going to have it from this Interurban line or know why. Lexington is not the only pebble on the beach, nor is this mismanaged Interurban line.

Now, gentlemen, we will not say Mr. Manager, for we don't believe you have got one, we will give you a few facts. On Sunday you advertised you would carry people to the V. M. I. ball park for 50 cents the round trip. Two hundred and four Parisians took advantage of these rates, or at least thought they were so doing. Two car loads had gone and when the crowd gathered for the 2 o'clock car several were informed by the company's representative that the tickets had run out, but get on the car and the conductor would furnish them. After about ninety had gotten on the car and the conductor began to collect the fares it was discovered that you had to pay 35 cents for one way. Several ladies got off the car about a mile and a half out on this account. Parties that we know who paid 35 cents for going out to the grounds were only charged 30 cents for return trip. Nice treatment to say the least. That's not the worst of it. After the game there were six cars standing at the gates to carry Lexington people home, two miles distance, and two hundred and four people from Paris, fifteen miles from home, had to wait on the road side from five o'clock until after six for their cars. This is not right and Paris people do not intend to be treated in this manner by you.

It is bum management pure and simple, or a direct insinuation that our people do not deserve the same accommodations as the Lexington people. Our money is just as good as Lexington money and we demand of you better treatment. Employ some good experienced railroad man to run your business and we are sure you will profit by it.

The Paris Fire Department.

It was again demonstrated at the fire of the colored United Brethren of Friendship's three-story building, on Eighth street, Friday morning, of the deplorable condition of our fire department, at one time the pride of Paris. There were three members, the full quota, present, and how they managed to save the building from complete destruction, was, indeed, remarkable. The water pressure was not sufficient to reach the second story, and not a ladder long enough to carry the hose to the second story. You remind the city fathers of this from time to time and you are given the laugh by some of the members of the august body called the City Council. One in particular, who owns a handsome residence on High street, which it has happened up to this time the fire fiend has never visited. Let this gentleman's house catch on fire and it burns to the ground for want of a ladder that was long enough to reach the second story, and we venture the assertion you would hear some loud talking about the d—n fire department, yes, you could even smell brimstone if you happened to be present. It is all right until somebody kicks your own dog, and then it is all wrong. The three members of the department are experts in their line and are world beaters, handicapped as they are by a City Council that takes no interest whatever in the fire department.

The Chairman of the Fire Committee, we understand, has attended one meeting of the Council since his election to that office. We still predict a big fire in Paris and when it comes the blame should rest where it belongs. Let the insurance companies make an investigation as matters now stand and rates will go higher than "a cat's back." The tax payers will not kick on your spending money on this department and it should be done before it is too late to save many dollars worth of property.

On yesterday morning, about 10:30 the department was called to the residence of Mr. W. L. Collins, on Seventh street, where a fire had considerable start on the roof of the house. After most excellent work by the three members of the department the house was saved, the loss being only several hundred dollars. It happened to be a one story house and the firemen could reach the roof by the little step ladder they carry. The wagon had to make a trip back to the engine house for enough hose to put on a second line.

Suggestion to the Building Committee.

If there is to be more money spent on the new court house we would like to make one suggestion to the Building Committee, and it is one we think by far of more importance than adding ornaments that will only be a benefit to the eye. By all means, gentlemen, have a change made in the front steps of this handsome new building, if you don't, the public should force you to. The steps are a disgrace to the building and not only an eyesore, but actually dangerous for old or young to go up and down. This change should be made at fall hazards and the architects attention should be called to the matter at once.

Blasting at City Quarry.

The blasting at the city quarry continued to become so dangerous to residents of that portion of the city, that we are informed the city officials notified the parties who are getting out the rock that if any more complaints were filed against them their contract would be revoked. Rocks have been falling on the houses and in the yards of citizens several squares from the quarry for some time, and up to Saturday no attention had been paid to this dangerous work. While the city was doing blasting we never heard of any complaints and we cannot see why the contractors now using the quarry cannot get rock out without endangering the lives of citizens.

A Small Strike.

About fifty of the shovelers working on Main street went out on a strike Saturday morning. The trouble seems to be on account of the contractors in making out their payroll in leaving Saturday's day's work off until the following week. It would be impossible for the contractors to make out their payroll, employing from 150 to 200 men, right up to the time they quit work on Saturday evening. The most of the strikers wanted to return to work, but were informed their services were not wanted in the future.

Buck's Hot Blast Heater.

A. F. Wheeler & Co. was busy all day Saturday in demonstrating to the public the advantages of the Buck Hot Blast Heater. It is the most wonderful heater ever put upon the market and you should call at the above firm's place of business, on corner of Main and Third street, and see for yourself. This stove will absolutely pay for itself in two to three seasons. There is absolutely no smoke, no gas, no soot; it is all burned up as fuel, and after the fire is started only a thin, colorless vapor goes out of the chimney. If you will let A. F. Wheeler & Co. demonstrate their claims to you, there will be no question about your buying a Buck's Hot Blast.

NO USE.

No it ain't no use
For to up an' go
Where the trees hang down,
An' the waters flow;
Nor to dig no worms,
Nor to cut no pole,
Nor to set an' fish
In a deep old hole,
Like you used to do
When the spring was new,
For the fish won't bite
Like they used to do.

You kin watch the buds,
An' the trees 'n' blooms;
But they ain't no buds,
Nor they ain't no perfumes,
Like the ones you knowed
In the days gone by,
And they ain't no clouds,
And they ain't no sky
Like the cloudy-bright
That they used to be,
And you needn't talk,
For yeh can't tell me!

An' they ain't such times
For to come again,
An' they ain't no springs
Like you drinked at then,
An' they ain't no birds
For to sing no more
Like they sung to a boy
That you knowed of yore;
And they ain't no time
For to tear a loose,
An'—but what's the use?
What's the dabbled use!

The Hermit

A Story of the Wilderness

CHAPTER XXII.—CONTINUED

"I feel I owe you an explanation, Angie," he said directly—they were seated on the old familiar pile of weather-worn planks. "As you may have heard, I have an inclination for trout culture, and one day it occurred to me that if I could buy the Mizzy swamp and falls of David Curtis at a reasonable price, it would not only be a good investment but make me a splendid fish-pond. I called on him, secured an option on it, and paid him something down. I found also that another party has been trying to buy him out, for mill purposes. Now comes another matter, which is all a mystery to me. First, as we all know, some enemy of his visits his premises nightly. David must have received an awful shock, and, in the delirious fever following it, he accused me of plotting against him in your behalf. It may and must be the result of a guilty conscience, but up till now I am innocent of what he charges."

"I've heard it all, of course," answered Angie, in a constrained voice, "and while it is painful to have a family skeleton become public gossip, I am relieved by what you tell me."

"I wish," continued Martin, hesitating, "I wish you would consent to let me do something for you in this matter. I know the whole story and how you have been wronged, and—and how you have gone all these years, bravely earning your own way, and now believe me, I want to be your friend, and big brother, and help you to your rights. Won't you let me?"

He spoke with earnestness and deep feeling, every word of which vibrated with love and tenderness, but Angie remained silent for a moment. In fact she was having a hard struggle with her own feelings.

"I thank you, my good friend," she replied at last, swallowing a lump, "but I can't consent—not now. I feel as Aunt Comfort does, that some day God will see all wrongs righted, and maybe mine, but I do not want them gossiped about any more than they are now. I thank you, though, with all my heart."

Then, as she turned toward him, her face ethereal in the moonlight, "with eyes kinder teary and lips kinder smiley," Martin almost lost his head in a sudden impulse to gather her close and whisper loving words.

For a moment he looked into those misty eyes, and then, lest heart conquer head, he rose from his seat. "I'm going to get you some sweet flag," he said, "in memory of the old times when we used to come here."

And when he—oblivious to the soft banks that soiled his boots—had gathered an armful of long, green shoots, and the two stood on the bridge, she selecting those with buds, while she ate them, throwing the stalks into the stream below, somehow there and then the old sweet dream crept into her heart once more, and all the years that intervened seemed to fade away.

What they spoke of now mattered not; the moon smiling in the pool below, the green flag shoots floating down the slow current, the whip-poor-wills calling in the near-by woods, were seen and heard as in a trance. When they turned from this spot, so fraught with tender memories, and Martin drew her arm within his, still retaining the hand he clasped, she made no protest.

When her home and the shading maples were reached, they paused a moment at the gate, he still holding the hand she had yielded and softly stroking it.

"Angie," he whispered at last, "can you, will you forgive me all these years of neglect but not forgetfulness, and let us begin where we left off; will you?"

"I will try," she answered gently. And as he attempted to clasp her waist, she drew away.

"No, not yet," she whispered.

When she entered the sitting room, Aunt Comfort was beside the window in her high-backed, wooden rocker, watching the moonlit meadows.

"Why, auntie," she exclaimed, "why haven't you gone to bed?"

"I was waitin' for you, my child," responded Aunt Comfort, rising, and then, looking down into Angie's eyes, tender in the soft light, she stooped and kissed her. To Angie it seemed like a benediction. It was, but Aunt Comfort had been thinking of that faded blouse and rusty sword hanging in her attic chamber.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A TASTE OF WOOD LIFE.

One day Martin discussed with old Cy the cause of David's scare and its results.

"It's a wakin' o' his sense o' guilt," old Cy responded to Martin's inquiry, "n' I wouldn't be s'prised if they found him dancin' in the mill some mornin'."

It's fear o' Amzi conin' back that ails him, n' I know it."

"But what scared him the night they found him ravin'?" queried Martin. "Do you imagine Amzi has returned and is in hiding?"

"No, not yet—not yet," answered old Cy, slowly shaking his head, "but he'll come some day sure's the sun rises, n' when he does, I'll be the fust to know it."

"But what scared David, do you think?"

Old Cy looked at Martin curiously. "Kin ye keep a secret?" he said.

"I will for you, old friend," answered Martin, earnestly.

"Wal, 'twas Nezer!"

"Nezer?"

"Yes, 'twas him ez hooked all the tools n' started the mill goin' n' finally played ghost that night. I've known it all long n' 'twas to git square fer jumpin' into a barbed-wire trap that old Dave sot fer the boys in the swimmin' hole. I heard on 't next day, n' I've bin watchin' Nezer ever since. I tell you that boy's a deal like a hornet n' a bad un to play tricks on. I've never let on, n' I don't want you to. Nezer scared the wits out o' old Dave that night, depend on 't, n' he ain't done yet. It's a sort o' dispensation o' Providence, so ter speak, n' I'm willin' he should keep at it. Old Dave robbed me o' house n' home once, n' now he's gittin' his deserts."

And old Cy's eyes twinkled. Martin looked at him in admiration. "And you have kept mum for a month, while the entire village was in an uproar," he said, "and even led the searching party!"

"Sartin, sartin," chuckled the old man; "I warn't goin' to spoil Nezer's game, n' I'm only waitin' fer him to skeer old Dave agin. He'll do it fore long, depend on 't. He ain't forgot jumpin' naked into a barbed-wire net yet, n' won't let up on Dave till he's driv him loony."

Then Martin laughed heartily as old Cy told how Nezer met his mishap, and how he had watched the boy lurking around the mill one night.

"I seen him cawlin' long like a cat in the shadder," he said, "n' down under the mill, n' perty soon I heard the mill start, n' the next, I saw Nezer come out n' sneak up the hill through the brush, n' I follered, not wantin' to be caught thar myself."

For a little time Martin remained silent, revolving a more important matter.

"Cy," he said, at last, "how would you like to go with me for a month's trip into the wilderness, where I took the doctor last spring? You have given me many a day's happiness when I was a boy, and now I'd like to return it. I'll rig you up with suitable togs, and give you a month's experience you won't forget. I want you also to see the old hermit we found."

Old Cy's eyes glistened.

"Ye won't be 'shamed o' me goin' n' comin', will ye? I'm sorter out o' place 'mong fells, ye know, I s'pose."

"I won't worry about that," laughed Martin, "and I don't know a human being I'd enjoy camping with any better than you. The fall season for shooting begins in a few weeks, and I'd like to see you face a big bull moose, or bring down a deer on the run. There's a few other wilderness experiences I'd like to see you enjoy, and then we may discover another wild man. The doctor and I found a hide-away log-cabin we didn't get very close to, and who occupied it has been a mystery to me ever since."

All the rest of the way home Martin enlarged upon the fascinations of wilderness life, and so elated was old Cy at his coming treat that he scarcely slept that night.

CHAPTER XXIV.

JUST A FORMAL GOOD-BY.

For a week now Angie had been school-teacher again, and twice a day she walked the distance of almost two miles to and from school. The leaves were turning, the maples in front of her home already a glow of yellow, and the advent of autumn only accentuated the memories clustering around the old red bridge she crossed morning and night. Occasionally she paused there on her way home, looking into the slow-flowing stream and thinking of this sturdy young man with kindly brown eyes and earnest ways. In his presence she felt herself somewhat of a child, and yet one who could hold him in restraint with a glance. And he had changed so from the old days!

Then a big, happy, quite harmless boy, now an almost stern man, and more like a lion liable to roar at any moment, and who must be treated with due consideration. The old resentment at his silent desertion was also vanishing, and as she glanced at the pile of bleaching planks under the willow each day, and realized how only her cool reserve had kept him at a distance, so far her face grew rosy.

And what was to be the outcome? Some day this forceful man would scorn her puny barrier, and what then? She could not always keep him at a distance; and did she want to? And could she say "yes" to a question she knew would sooner or later be asked?

There would be no opposition if she did. Aunt Comfort would sew until blind to help get her ready for the all-important step, and then, left alone, would cry her old heart out in solitude.

But could she trust her very life, and all chance for happiness, in his hands, and desert the good old soul who had been mother so many years? It must come to that, she felt, for his adopting Greenville as a permanent residence was unlikely. She was sure his trout-raising hobby was but a short-lived fad, and to content himself in slow-growing Greenville for long was not to be expected. He had grown used to the busy world of a great city and back to it he must go or be miserable. She even doubted if he would remain there after snow came and the dreary monotony of winter began. And as she looked down into the dark, slow-eddy current, and thought of the white pall that would then hide it, and how even the sight of a snowbird was a relief, then the sorrow, that all through life keeps pace with joy, touched her heart—and not so much her own as that of another, who had even less to anticipate!

She had little to look forward to. It was all alike—the same unvarying round of home life, night and morning; the long walk to school in heat, rain, or snow; the monotony of lessons so simple to her, so hard for the pupils; the goings to church to see the same faces each Sunday, and hear the same sermonizing there, to repeat it all the next week.

She knew what Aunt Comfort would say if asked. She knew what that good soul's waiting up for her and the kiss that was a benediction meant! But she knew what Aunt Comfort would say if asked. She knew what that good soul's waiting up for her and the kiss that was a benediction meant! But no, it should not be, and, as she turned away from the dark current, it was with a resolve to say "no" when the time came, and come what may, abide with and care for Aunt Comfort so long as she lived.

And that evening Martin called. "I leave for the wilderness to-morrow," he said, when greetings had been exchanged, "and am taking old Cy with me." And then ensued a somewhat humorous account of how that unique old man felt about the trip and what he was likely to meet. It was rather forced; for Martin felt himself starting upon a momentous expedition, and leaving Angie just now was also unpleasant. Then again, he sorely wanted to confide in some one, and yet dared not.

A secret is a burden, be it good or evil, and all the possibilities of joy and sorrow contained in the one Martin carried made it a double burden. In due time, and as usual, Aunt Comfort withdrew, and he was alone with Angie.

And now she too seemed out of sorts.

"My school has been troublesome to-day," she said, in response to his inquiry, "and the turning leaves always affect me in a peculiar way. I am positively unbearable all through the melancholy days," she added, affecting a laugh, "and I think my school noticed it."

Martin did, at least, and quick of intuition realized that even a hint of love-making now would be out of place.

"You are not quite your usual self," he said at last, almost desperately, "and I am way down hill in my mood."

"You ought not to be," she returned, smiling at him, "you have a few weeks of camp-fires, bough beds, and wilderness life ahead, and I almost envy you. I'd like to look into your camp some evening and see you cooking. Shall you visit that old hermit on your trip?"

"I expect to," answered Martin, feeling himself grow hot and cold, "but I wish the doctor were going also."

And now a strange fatality led Angie to ask all about this hermit—how he looked, lived, and acted, who he might be, and where he came from.

"I've thought of him so many times since the doctor told me," she added, after Martin had answered her questions as vaguely as possible, "and the more I think of it, the more pitiful his life seems. I wish I could send him something."

Then a new thought came to Martin. He had an old and faded picture of Angie, taken at 16, with hair in curls; and now he must have a later one for a purpose he dared not even hint, and how to get it without exciting her curiosity was a question.

"Angie," he said after a pause, "please come into the parlor and sing some of the old songs for me."

"With pleasure," she responded, rising; "do you feel churchy again?" Then she led the way to the parlor, where an album lay on the center-table.

And now a spirit of mischief all at once seemed to animate this cloud-and-sunshine girl, and the very song he had listened to outside the evening of his arrival—the plaint of "Sweet Camella May's" love-sick adorer—was her first selection. Then came "The Quilting Party," and a half dozen other old-time love-songs, and Martin, just a wee bit love-sick, and conscious that he had best keep it to himself, sat and listened.

When she ceased, he rose to go. "Good-by, Angie," he said, extending his hand at the door, and as she took it their eyes met—his full of trouble and despondency, hers a trifle wistful. "I shall carry the memory of your face into the wilderness with me," he added, glancing at the hand he still held "and—and don't forget me."

When the sound of his steps had vanished in the still night, she returned to the parlor and sat down. Through an open window came the faint tinkle of leaves falling from the maples, down the valley the low murmur of the Mizzy falls, and from the sitting room, the slow, measured tick of the clock. She was accustomed to hours of solitude, her life was one of dull, flat monotony to which she was hardened. But somehow just now the parlor seemed like a tomb. Full well she knew that Martin had come to say more than a formal good-by. By sheer force of will-power she had checked it, as she meant to in the future. It was against her own heart-yearnings now, but it was her duty; and as she thought of the wrinkled face upstairs and the faded blouse and sword, and realized how her own young life and love were all Aunt Comfort had left, her resolution and sense of obligation grew stronger.

Once a less thoughtful girl, she might and no doubt would have brushed all duty aside in response to a lover's claim; now more mature duty came first.

For a little time she sat there listening to the slow—never, never, never—beats of the clock, and living over old-time memories. One by one they came back, and like vanished blessings, seeming the sweeter, and now this new insidious impulse that must be stifled. And as the little heartache grew apace, her eyes filled.

"Pshaw," she exclaimed at last, rising and brushing the tears away, "how silly. I am a woman now, and women are born to suffer in silence."

CHAPTER XXV.

IN THE WILDERNESS ONCE MORE.

Never before, during old Cy's unfortunate and hand-to-mouth existence, had so much delightful expectation entered as the morning he left Greenville as Martin's companion, attired in new brown corduroy. The best of any pleasure is in anticipation, and the old man, now barbered into more human semblance, looked 20 years younger. Then the busy world they soon entered, the rushing trains, the crowded cities, the hurrying people, the hasty meals, the night on a train, were one and all so great a change from his simple life in Greenville, that he almost lost his senses. His sleeping-car experience, and his first one, was almost ludicrous in its effect upon him.

"It sorter seemed just like bein' in a coffin 'n' clankin' right along toward kingdom come," he said next morning in response to Martin's inquiries as to how he slept, "n' every time the train rocked, I thought I'd got thar."

But when the border of the wilderness was reached, old Cy felt more at home, for forest lakes and streams had been his lifelong companions. He was somewhat surprised at the extensive purchases Martin made at the little village store, and especially at a complete suit of men's clothing with double sets of flannel underwear, but asked no questions. Neither did he have any idea of the real and ultimate object of the trip, and was not told until our old friends Levi and Jean had pushed the well-loaded canoes 20 miles up a broad stream, and the first camp was made. All that day old Cy had been like a boy in his enjoyment of this new wonder world of dark bordering forest disturbed only by the rippling stream, the cry of an eagle sailing over a mountain top, or the clatter of a flock of ducks rising out of a lagoon; and then, when the tent was pitched, supper eaten, and Martin was reclining upon his blanket and slowly puffing his pipe, he told the story of the hermit, and who he was suspected to be.

"The doctor and I had a trip full of unusual and mysterious experiences last spring," he said, "and it's only a surmise on my part, even now, what the hermit was. First we were visited by the wild man about whom I told you, then we came upon a secluded log-cabin that might have been his lair and might not. A week later we discovered a human prowler at night, equally mysterious, and finally this hermit—a morose, harmless, old man, who had made friends of the squirrels and evidently was averse to our company. I have a suspicion he is the long-vanished Amzi, and if so, you are the only one who can tell, and also the only one whom he would be likely to remember. If it is Amzi, he is, without doubt, partially demented. But whether or no, if he recognizes you, his old-time companion, we have established a fact which I can use to bring David to terms. If it is not Amzi, no harm is done."

"An' 'twas fer him ya bought th' extra clothes?" queried old Cy, with keen interest; then adding, after a pause, with visible emotion, "Mr. Friebie, how fer is it to whar he was livin', n' kin we fetch it in another day? If it turns out to be Amzi, I'll jist squat down an' blubber like a baby. I'm sure on 't."

Martin smiled. "I'm glad I brought you, old friend," he answered, watching his face and eyes that glistened in the firelight. "If it proves to be Amzi, you alone can reach his memory and maybe induce him to return to Greenville." Then, as the astonishing effect such a return would have on that village flashed into his mind, he added, "I'd give a cool thousand for the chance to walk up to old Dave and say, 'Here's your brother Amzi; I found him in the wilderness.'"

IN GREAT DISTRESS

VOMITING SPELLS LONG RESISTED EVERY EFFORT TO CHECK.

Mrs. Brooks became so weak she thinks she would have died but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Sarah L. Brooks, of No. 45 Lincoln Park, Chicago, Illinois, gives the following account of her cure from distressing spells of vomiting:

"For five years off and on I was treated in vain by different doctors for relief from a stomach trouble which showed itself in frequent and trying spells of vomiting. Part of the time I was able to work and again I would be confined to bed for three or four days in succession.

"My stomach was at times so delicate that it would not retain even plain water. The spells would sometimes occur at intervals of half an hour, and would leave me so weak that I would be compelled to lie down between them. I would have several of them during the night following a day of such attacks. Finally I became so weakened that I had to give up working altogether. I weighed only ninety-four pounds.

"Last January I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in one of the Chicago daily papers and bought a box and began to use them. After I had used half a box I found that I could keep on my stomach the food I ate. I was encouraged by this and kept on using the pills for four months. At the end of that time the vomiting spells had ceased altogether and my weight went up to 142 pounds and is still growing.

"I think I surely would have died if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I sometimes vomited clear blood, and for three or four days at a time I could not eat a bite of anything. One doctor said I had chronic inflammation of the stomach, and another said my difficulty was a cancer, but none of their medicines did me any good at all. Finally I concluded that I did not have blood enough to digest my food and I began the treatment that has cured me. I can eat anything now, and have strength for all kinds of work. I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on hand, and I recommend them to my friends because I know they cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills agree with the most delicate stomachs and strengthen the digestive organs until they do their work perfectly. They are sold by all druggists.

Ere we were wed I did adore the maiden fair on the top floor of the apartment house next door; I called her "angel" times a score, but now her actions make me sore. I've troubles great and small galore and I can't sleep because her snore sounds like a western cyclone's roar.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Julia's Hope.

"You cannot go to another hop!" To Julia said her dad; So she staid at home and took it out In being hopping mad.

—Philadelphia Bulletin.

REMINDING HIM.

Newitt—Well, there's one thing about the weather. It's always a safe topic of conversation.

Borroughs—I thought it was to-day when I met Lendham, but when I started to speak of it he said: "Yes, it's unsettled, and that reminds me of that account of yours."—Smith's Weekly.

The Vanity of Greatness.

Her husband was handsome and true, He had fame, he owned horses and lands, But sorrow was hers; people knew His grandfather worked with his hands.

—Chicago Record-Herald.

Terrible.

"Why is Belle so bitter against Charlie?"

"He arose and gave her his seat in the street car."

"Why, I should have thanked him."

"She did, and he said: 'Not at all. Mother always taught me to be polite to old ladies.'"

—Chicago Daily News.

No Cause for Alarm.

"Williams," exclaimed Mrs. Upmore, pale with fright, "what has become of the silver? Were burglars in the house last night?"

"No, m'm," replied the butler. "The young lady guests carried them away last evening as soon as m'm."

—Chicago Tribune.

Fine Sensibilities.

"Why are you so anxious to get control of the government?" asked the Moroccan bandit of his chief. "Aren't you making money enough collecting ransoms?"

"Yes. But it is so much easier and more dignified to collect taxes."—Washington Star.

Sorgo, or dourah, as it is known in Abyssinia, forms the basis of Mohammedan nourishment. To the population of the hot valleys the sorgo takes the place of rice among the Chinese. The average price to the farmer is 38 cents per 220 pounds. There is an unfailing market for the grain. The leaves of the plant are used as fodder and the stalk as fuel. In the regions where the sorgo is grown no rotation of crops is undertaken, with the result that the land is more or less exhausted.

THE KEGS WERE LIGHTER.

Dr. Lorimer's Easy Explanation of an Apparently Difficult Performance.

Rev. George C. Lorimer, whose death at Aix was recently reported, was the main impetus that carried on the building of Boston's magnificent Tremont Temple, and Dr. Lorimer's wit, sincerity and imaginative sympathy made him a great favorite with the students of Harvard during his residence in Boston.

At Cambridge, one day, according to a current story, an undergraduate asked the opinion of Dr. Lorimer on drinking—moderate drinking.

"I am opposed to it," the clergyman said. "It is perilous. It frequently leads to drunkenness. In fact, most drunkards were moderate drinkers first."

"Naturally, male liquors and wines, though, are strengthening, aren't they?" the student asked.

Dr. Lorimer smiled.

"Beer," he said, "is very strengthening. I have known young men to have sent to their rooms large kegs of beer that they could not budge at first, and a day or two later they would be able to lift these kegs with ease."

Insurmountable.

An indignant letter dictated by a clever old gentleman runs thus: "Sir, my stenographer, being a lady, cannot take down what I think of you. I, being a gentleman, cannot express it; but you, being neither, can readily divine it."—Argonaut.

Two severe cases of Ovarian Trouble and two terrible operations avoided. Mrs. Emmons and Mrs. Coleman each tell how they were saved by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am so pleased with the results obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it a duty and a privilege to write you about it."

"I suffered for more than five years with ovarian troubles, causing an unpleasant discharge, a great weakness, and at times a faintness would come over me which no amount of medicine, diet, or exercise seemed to correct. Your Vegetable Compound found the weak spot, however, within a few weeks—and saved me from an operation—all my troubles had disappeared, and I found myself once more healthy and well. Words fail to describe the real, true, grateful feeling that is in my heart, and I want to tell every sick and suffering sister. Don't dally with medicines you know nothing about, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and take my word for it, you will be a different woman in a short time."—Mrs. LAURA EMMONS, Walkerville, Ont.

Another Case of Ovarian Trouble Cured Without an Operation.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For several years I was troubled with ovarian trouble and a painful and inflamed condition, which kept me in bed part of the time. I did so dread a surgical operation."

"I tried different remedies hoping to get better, but nothing seemed to bring relief until a friend who had been cured of ovarian trouble, through the use of your compound, induced me to try it. I took it faithfully for three months, and at the end of that time was glad to find that I was a well woman. Health is nature's best gift to woman, and if you lose it and can have it restored through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel that all suffering women should know of this."—Mrs. LAURA BELLE COLEMAN, Commercial Hotel, Nashville, Tenn.

It is well to remember such letters as above when some druggist tries to get you to buy something which he says is "just as good." That is impossible, as no other medicine has such a record of cures as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; accept no other and you will be glad.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

$5000 FORFEIT If we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.
